Sunshine and Races
Mr. Romth's Old Chinese

Miami, Fla., Feb. 4.—One night in Miami, involving nearly two thousand miles of travel to and fro, then back to New York, with a stopover in Washington. Such is life when you work for modern newspapers.

There is plenty of leisure, apparently, in Florida's brilliant sunshine; tens of thousands of automobiles from all over the United States blocking traffic, parked the length of every street on both sides; horse races by day, attracting crowds that the depression has not impoverished; dog races at night, if the day is not long enough for gambling.

E. C. Romth, head of the First National Bank, whose bank has never closed, except under government compulsion during the bank holiday, takes a cheerful view of life and conditions for the long pull. That is easy when your bank has never closed.

He tells of an aged Chinese of Miami who had $300 in the bank during the panic of 1907, when deposits were repaid in installments. The old Chinese, he said, he could get $25 each day until he had drawn out his $300, expressed no concern. "Valley well," said he, "America too big go broke."

Mr. Romth, who came here from Arkansas when four years old and had known every brand of honest poverty and liked none of them when he started banking and raised his bank from ten millions to seventy-two millions of deposits, says one of our troubles is:

"The rich have no sense and the poor have no money."

Also, in the worst of times, when values dropped, salaries dropped, profits vanished, government expenses went on, always increasing.

He thinks the American people have got to cease letting politicians spend all the people's ears.

Asked if he expects inflation, Mr. Romth says:

"We have inflation now, piled up in the banks, billions of it. Only it is not used. It is not good to have money accumulated, if it lies idle. The government has spent enough money already to buy three currencies, but it does not go in the right direction."

You know, of course, how the money piles up. This is not Mr. Romth talking. The government, instead of printing money and paying bills, prints silly inflation bonds that bear interest, which doubles the government's debt. It nominally, sells those bonds to financial institutions. In reality the government pays $500,000 on five million worth of bonds. The government, nominally, deposits the balance, $4,500,000, in its bank. He can go to the Federal Reserve and get five million in new cash on his hand, which he has only paid ten per cent.

That's paying two per cent interest on the five million cash, he can lend the money at ten per cent, ranging as low as ten per cent in different states.

The trouble is now that anybody who wants to borrow money must have collateral that bankers call "safe." Too much of anything is considered safe, except gold, which nobody is allowed to have.

Mr. Romth, as "liquid" as the middle spot in the Pacific ocean, says:

"I am not worrying about the dollar dropping to a dime. I am wondering whether the dime will drop through the hole in the dollar."

Some of President Roosevelt's educated gentlemen, that have undergone no greater hardship than being initiated in university secret societies, might learn a good deal talking for half an hour with E. C. Romth of Miami. He knows what the people are thinking, and what a dollar is, and asked what is the safest investment is to learn how to catch fish. If you can do that, you can always eat.

Mr. Romth wonders why, when everything began going to smash, railroad rates went up, taxes went up, then that local bonds demanded 100 per cent plus interest, "like demanding the pound of flesh and the quart of blood." And he wonders why the only people that receive any consideration as regards taxes were those that owned unimproved lands.

Donald R. Richberg tells union leaders that he is a "traitor to labor" that he is a government employee, not a labor man.

When Legree said, "You belong to me, body and soul," Old Uncle Tom answered:

"No, you own my body, but I belong to the Lord."

Not exactly in so many words, continued on Page 4, Column 6

PENSION Cost Cut URGED MORGENTHAU ASKS CHANGE

Washington, Feb. 5.—Warning that old-age pensions will ultimately cost over 4000 millions a year, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau today urged drastic changes in the administration's security program.

He submitted his proposals to the House ways and means committee, which is considering the legislation.

Morgenthau proposed:

1.—New contributory taxes in the compulsory contributory pension plan designed to avoid imposing heavy burdens upon future generations.

2.—A new earnings tax of 2 per cent for three years beginning in 1937 and rising to 5 per cent in 12 years.

3.—Transfer to the Treasury the issuing of voluntary annuity certificates.

4.—Temporarily eliminating casual workers, farm labor and servants from the compulsory contributory system.

His proposals dealt wholly with the old age pension scheme, proposed by the committee on economic security. He did not touch upon unemployment insurance.

The Treasury plan would save several taxpayers an estimated 1478 millions annually from 1930 on by eliminating all contributions to the contributory old age system from general Treasury revenue. The system would be financed entirely by the payroll taxes.

Legionnaires today opposed a legislative bill to permit hunting on Armistice Day. John H. Walsh, American Legion legislative agent, declared the bill to be an opening wedge toward defeating the purpose of Armistice Day legislation.

Mrs. Dionne Ashamed To Talk of Quins

By International News Service

Chicago, Feb. 5.—"It makes me feel ashamed to talk about it," Mrs. Elzira Dionne, mother of the world famous Canadian quintuplets, informed besighting reporters early today on arrival here.

Mrs. Dionne, and her husband, Oliver, are here to fulfill a 10-day stage engagement.

It was their second train ride. The first was in 1928 when they went to Ottawa on their honeymoon.

"I don't like to talk about it," Mrs. Dionne insisted, when the birth of the five babies was mentioned. "It makes me feel ashamed."

She speaks only French and answered questions through her son, Mrs. Joseph Rochan, of North Bay, Ont., who is traveling with the party.

"Just before I left Sunday, I said to the ladies," Mrs. Dionne said, "They're pretty babies and I'm proud of them."

"I was surprised as the rest of the world," she explained about their arrival. "I never thought I would have five. When I saw them I wondered what the neighbors think."

What did the couple from the little Canadian farm want to see most of all in Chicago?

"A night club entertainment," said Father Dionne. "We have heard so much about them. They are gay, no? We are waiting to see them."

Mother Dionne nodded.

"She wants to visit a night club, but also she wants to go through the large stores," said an interpreter. "The toy sections and the infants' wear—she has so many presents to take back home."

Dionne also expressed the hope that he could "get over to see the stockyards."

The resolution would require the company to be reported favorably to the Senate by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The resolution would make available a fund of $750,000 for the Interstate Commerce Commission investigation.

It has been known for some time that the intimate of both men that efforts were being made by friends to bring the two together.

If the rumor is correct this would be the first time that the former Kaiser's eldest son has sat down to an intimate conversation with the present German leader.

It was indicated that the two had discussed "pressing political business."

RUNYON & SNYDER

PRINCES OF HARMONY

"Wonder How the Old Folks Are at Home!"

IT MAKES THEM SAD

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 5.—A large, husky, fierce-looking gentleman in a cap and leather windbreaker, appeared in Nellie's tap room the other evening, called for a salad of applesack, glared at this cringing writer, and in a voice that suggested an anvil's clang, remarked:

"Mickey Walker is the greatest fighter that ever lived. My name is Fred Snyder."

So we became good friends.

Inside of the next five minutes we were assembled at a table in the tap room with Mr. Leroy Greene, of Philadelphia, and Mr. Ken Boile, of Columbus, O., the only states wearing light reporter in Flemington, and Mr. Snyder was teaching us to sing a song entitled, "I Wonder How the Old Folks Are at Home."

Mr. Snyder explained that this is his favorite song. We sang it over and over until we got it down so good the guests in the Union Hotel commenced to complain.

"Yes, sir," said Mr. Snyder, "I love that song. My wife is on the jury locked up upstairs, and she'll hear us and say, 'That's Fred down there singing.' Now let's try it again."

Mrs. Verna Snyder Fred Snyder

Harmony for the Missus

We put in "Down by the Old Mill Stream" by way of variety, and a few other refrains, but always we got back to "I Wonder How the Old Folks Are at Home." Mr. Fred Snyder did not care to get too far away from that, possibly because he felt his locked up spouse would appreciate it more.

Mr. Snyder's wife is our famous juror in the Hauptmann trial. She is Juror No. 3, first name Verna, and is a lady of very generous proportions. Mr. Snyder is a blacksmith at Centerville, some six miles from here, at the cross of the river, and upon seeing Mr. Snyder we immediately start saying to yourself:

"A spreading chestnut tree, The village smithy stands, The smith, a mighty man is he, With large and sinewy hands."

The writer hopes that this is a correct quotation. We have no Longfellow handy in Nellie's tap room.

Mr. Snyder sits up and yawns, and has a square jaw and a fierce demeanor that utterly belies his true nature. Mr. Snyder is innately a hell fellow, and at heart a singer of songs.

"You see this eye?" he said, "You see this nose?" Boxing, Mike, is a great change, and a hell fellow, and at heart a singer of songs. But Mickey Walker is the greatest fighter that ever lived. Let's sing that song again—I wonder How the Old Folks Are at Home."

About this time, a man of strangely truculent manner appeared in Nellie's tap room and began saying: "He that so," and, "What you know about that." "Oh! You will, will you?" and uttering other imprecations, and finally he fell into the error of squaring off at Mr. Fred Snyder in the general posture of an old time brawler of the late John L. Sullivan.

Mr. Snyder got up, removed his wind breaker and reached out and slapped the man on the chest. This incident called for summary action on the part of Mr. Earl Gary, our genial host of Nellie's tap room.

Mr. Gary came around the bar and without bothering to take off his apron, buried the man out into the zero weather. We do not care for the man's looks, but we do care for his actions, and we started all over again on "I Wonder How the Old Folks Are at Home."

Mr. Snyder said right now, "That's Fred down there," said Mr. Snyder.

Mr. Snyder seemed somewhat guiltily conscious of the cap that perched on his head.

"You see this eye?" he said, "Verna takes caps, but I like 'em, so, when she got locked up with the jury I went out and bought this cap. I passed her today when the jury was going to dinner, and she didn't speak to me. I guess it was on account of my cap."

"I got four days' dirty dishes all washed up at once today," he continued, "A fellow don't have much fun when his wife is on the jury. Now let's take another crack at 'I Wonder How the Old Folks Are at Home.'"

The writer highly recommends "I Wonder How the Old Folks Are at Home" to all lovers of barroom chords. It makes a fellow feel very sad. If it makes a fellow like the writer (he said, what do you suppose it does to a chap whose wife is on the jury?)

Wife Sure of Verdict; Thanks Bruno's Friends

By JEANETTE SMITS

International News Service Special Correspondent
Flemington, Feb. 5.—Bruno Hauptmann "could not" have been the despicable character—the cold-blooded collector of blood money—that the state has pictured him.

If he had been such a man, his friends would have rallied to his support, testified in his defense as they have done and will continue to do in the next few days. Mrs. Anna Hauptmann pointed out that:

"Except for the fact that Achenbach, who lied on the stand, not one of our friends has ever said a word against Richard," she declared. "Many of them have taken a lot of time and trouble to come here for his sake and tell things that are true."

"Sometimes when I think how true they are, I almost could cry. That shows what a good man he really is—not like the procurator are trying to make him seem."

Hauptmann made a hurried trip to New York last night to bring her niece back. Mrs. Maria

Spectators, other than witnesses and newsmen, were barred from the courtroom by Justice Cotillo, who said he would not permit the trial to become a hippodrome.

A dozen large bags containing figures on Rudy's earnings were brought in by four accountants, two each representing Fay and Rudy.

Through their figures Rudy hopes to show that his income is not such as to warrant Fay's request that the separation agreement under which she receives $100 a week be set aside and her allowance increased.

"$100 Too Much"

Attorney Buehler told the court that "if Mrs. Vallee got $100 a week, she got $100 too much because she carried on with the Garfield Leon. We will show that Mr. Vallee learned of it and had records made of her voice and of Leon's."

Gray Leon is a dancer. He was referred to indirectly by Sheridan when Rudy's lawyer said that Attorney Buehler, in whose office the separation agreement was drawn, and Vallee represented to Fay and her father that they had drawn evidence of telephone conversations.

This, said Sheridan, was one of the so-called "trick" and artifice practiced when Fay had no lawyer to advise her.

Rudy was the first witness and under examination by Attorney Sheridan his earnings from several pictures. One, "George White's Scandals," made him $4000 a week for four weeks, the crooner testified.

Another, made for Warner Brothers, brought him $3000, Sheridan said.

That was not good, old days," sighed Rudy.

"I'm better now, or worse, than I used to be," inquired Rudy.

Rudy had been half lolling in the witness chair, draw card and all. He indignantly replied:

Snap's Answers

"It has nothing to do with my personality," he said.

"Well," said Sheridan, "handily. 'I just wanted to find out if you make much money now as you did then.'"

"Not at all," snapped Rudy. Justice Cotillo interrupted to ask: "Is Sheridan?"

"If you can show the defendant made $100,000 to $150,000 a year, I will allow that $100 a week for his wife is not adequate."

However, you would have to show that she signed the separation agreement and that she was a dupe."

Webb called "While Rudy's books were examined."

Fay's attorney, Clarence E. Webb, called to the stand, testified that Rudy was describing the conversation he had with Buehler, Vallee's attorney, who had signed the separation agreement giving Mrs. Vallee $100 a week was entered into.

Fay told Bush that I had checked up on Vallee's records and he was no angel," Webb said. "Bush asked me, 'Will you tell Vallee that?' I told him 'I would.'"

This conversation took place in the attorney's New York office, Webb testified, after he had come from California in response to a telephone request by his son-in-law.

Tells of Urgent Call

Questioned by Sheridan, the police chief said that early on the morning of April 1, 1932, Vallee telephoned him from New York and told him to come there immediately.

"What was the trouble?" I asked Vallee," Webb related.

"I can't tell over the telephone," was his reply.

The witness said that he then called his daughter who declared she knew of no trouble. Arriving in New York on April 5, Webb related, he found his daughter in a rooming house, where she was waiting for him in her bedroom.

"I'm here," she shouted. "I'm here," she shouted.

Sheridan asked her: "It was not apparent why Mrs. Vallee wanted to see you?"

"She said she had been eating breakfast."

"My daughter seemed upset and nervous," said Webb. "Then Vallee came in and I shook hands with her. Nothing was said about the trial."

"Did you see him embrace your daughter?" asked Sheridan.

"No," Webb replied. "A strange relationship existed between them."

Then Webb described the conference in Buehler's office—the conference which, according to Rudy, took place in the morning of the separation agreement under and through attorney.

That Fatal Name 'Fay'!

How Much More Will Rudy Hear of It?

"Fay—or Faye." How that name has tied itself up in Rudy Vallee's love life! He's in New York Supreme Court today fighting a legal move on the part of his estranged wife, Fay Webb Vallee, to make him pay an increased amount for the privilege of being separated from her. At the same time, friends of Rudy, in and out of Alice Fay, above, Rudy's one-time motion picture co-star, are waiting anxiously to see if Miss Faye doesn't fight, perhaps dramatically, in testimony introduced by Fay Webb's counsel.

BAY STATE Fisch Linked to Ransom; Defense Attacks Jafsie

Expert Feels BRUNO GUILTY

A Worcester man, who had been tentatively counted upon as a defense witness for Bruno Richard Hauptmann, told the Boston Evening American today:

"I think Hauptmann is guilty."

The man, Paul D. Kneeland, Worcester lumber dealer and nationally known wood expert, who inspected the Lindbergh kidnap ladder for the state of New Jersey, Hauptmann's defense chief, Edward J. Reilly, announced at Flemington today that he had wired Kneeland asking him to be a witness.

Reilly said Kneeland would testify to a belief that a left-handed man, not much of a carpenter, fashioned the ladder.

The defense counted upon him to refute the testimony of Arthur Kobler, Wisconsin wood expert, who traced a piece of the ladder right into the Hauptmann attic.

Kneeland was not in Worcester in 1932, but a 1933 telephone at the Mount Royal Hotel, Montreal, he said.

"I shall not go to Flemington. I think Hauptmann is guilty. I conferred with Kobler several times. He knows his stuff and he is absolutely right."

Kneeland is a partner in the Kneeland-Morrill Lumber Company, 240 Main st., Worcester, and lives at 110 Beeching st., Worcester.

Lawrence Feb. 5.—Joseph Riggs, 34, of Methuen, who was injured and saw his two companions killed by an automobile Sunday, was rushed from his home to Lawrence General Hospital today.

His release caused a postponement of the hearing of six charges preferred against James J. Keefe, 24, of Hancock street, Lawrence, who was charged with the driver of the car.

Keefe was arraigned and pleaded not guilty to two charges of manslaughter, operating to endanger, leaving the scene after an accident, and driving under the influence and being drunk.

Police Chief Joseph Hutchinson of Methuen told Judge Frederic N. Chandler that Riggs was the only eyewitness to the deaths of Thomas Dwyer, 36, and Ernest Martello, 43.

SECRETS Lost to BRUNO DENY DEFENSE POLICE RECORD

Malden Girl Double for Billie Burke

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press)

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 5.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann today lost, at least temporarily, a battle to force Colonel H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the New Jersey police, to reveal what he told newspapers during the investigation of the Lindbergh kidnaping.

Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, ruling against the defense on its effort to make Schwarzkopf produce his press releases, allowed Hauptmann's attorneys to reserve the right to argue the point later.

A petition presented by Schwarzkopf to be released from a subpoena served on him by the defense directing him to produce in court today all his press releases from the kidnap case, March 1, 1932, to Nov. 1, 1934, photographs, reports on the kidnap and many other data contained in state police investigation records.

The request "all too indefinite and uncertain," Schwarzkopf said, denied the petition which Attorney General Joseph A. Langan asked.

Langan read from cases supporting the state's position, one of the reasons "that the state's petition is not to be encouraged."

The court refused to require Colonel Schwarzkopf to produce the press releases and deny the defense.

"We feel our position is perfectly sound in asking for the records. This is one of the major factors of the case bearing on the question of criminality involved."

Witness interposed, offering to produce "this truck load" of records if the defense desired.

"All in Brief Case"

Fischer said the reports could be brought to court in a brief case.

Fischer renewed his request for press releases, "over Colonel Schwarzkopf's signature," which denied the petition which Attorney General Joseph A. Langan asked.

Langan insisted that the subpoena did not cover production of newspaper reports.

Justice Trenchard told Fischer he did not see the material of the press releases the defense sought.

"The materiality in this, Your Honor," Fischer went on, "this man headed the police investigation and anything he signed or wrote is material in these releases for the defense. I feel I must deny your request."

"Unless you can show," said the justice, "something in material in these releases for the defense, I feel I must deny your request."

Quincy Editor Secret Bridegroom

John R. Herbert, 26, city editor of the Quincy Patriot Ledger, was married last night to Miss Miss Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. Herbert, 26, of Quincy, Mass., 17 Bellevue avenue, Squantum, it became known today.

Herbert is son of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Herbert of Squantum. He is a graduate of Boston University, class of 1931.

The couple were classmates at Quincy High School, graduating in 1926.

ETHEL COCHRAN

(Mother to Bruno Richard Hauptmann)

Because she resembles Billie Burke when that noted actress was a youthful stage star and the test of Broadway, Miss Ethel Cochran, 32, of Wrentham street, Malden, a Boston artist's model, may play a leading screen role in Hollywood.

Already screen tests have been made of Miss Cochran in New York and now, it was learned today, she is awaiting word from Hollywood.

The Malden beauty may get her chance because a film company wishes to produce "The Great Ziegfeld" and has been casting about for a girl suitable to take the role of Billie Burke, who married the glorifier of American girls and is now his widow.

Officials of the company were told of Miss Cochran's resemblance and called her to New York, where she was seen by the company.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Cochran and is a graduate of Malden high school and a Boston school of dramatic art.

PENSION Fails to Win HOUSE

TOWNSEND IN SETBACK

By International News Service
Washington, Feb. 5.—Dr. Francis E. Townsend, who claims 20,000,000 petitioners for his $200-a-month old age pension plan, it appeared today, has failed to "sell" the plans to the House ways and means committee.

After questioning Dr. Townsend and Glenn Hudson, his aid, members of the committee were as critical as they were at the start.

None, however, would flatly denounce the Townsend bill but the plan is expected to be forgotten in the clashing of the administration's economic program.

Hudson, an Oakland, California, insurance man, who appears as Townsend's statistical expert, admitted he would not vote for the pending Townsend bill in its present form.

He said the bill of Representative McCarty (D.) of California, which embodies the Townsend plan, should be changed.

Ruin Visioned

Representative Brooks (D.) of Pennsylvania, asserted the Townsend plan would force a $200,000,000 inflation which would shatter private industry and ruin the welfare of the nation.

He said the bill would make the country "financially paralytic" and "lead to the ruin of the nation."

FINISH Of New Deal SEEN

PROGRAM FACES COLLAPSE

By JOHN T. LAMBERT
Washington, Feb. 5.—President Roosevelt was concentrating upon his vast 4880 million dollars public works program today while other basic elements of his new deal were tottering dangerously toward the verge of collapse.

NRA was riddled by the numerous attacks made upon it. The federal housing drive appeared to be the victim of suspended animation.

The Supreme Court decision in the gold case held the possibility of discarding the administration's most aggressive and sweeping adventure in currency reform.

The threat of the 2000 million dollar bonus bill was just around the corner.

Honeymoon Over

Official Washington has come to believe that the President's honeymoon period is at an end and the next few weeks will draw upon all his resources of brilliant and determined leadership.

His progressive program now contains these two major features:

1—Adoption of the 4880 million dollar public works program in appropriation in the hope that compulsory employment may soon be afforded to 3,500,000 idlers.

2—Allocation by Congress to the Home Owners Loan Corporation of authority to issue an additional 100 million dollars of government bonds in order that 300,000 more homes may be rescued from the threat of mortgage foreclosure.

With the adoption of the public works program, President Roosevelt would allot probably 500 million to the construction of new schools, hospitals and larger amounts for grandfathering elimination, for slum clearance in the cities and the building of rural subsistence homesteads.

His program, he hopes, would give marked and dramatic impetus to general economic revival by affording productive employment to millions of men and stimulating the building trades and languishing heavy-metal industries.

But against this program, Congress has begun to show signs of hesitancy. He will get the 4880 million dollars only after the senate has demonstrated reluctance to vest enormous power in the hands of any individual.

Bitter Attacks

So bitter have been the attacks upon NRA that there now exists grave doubts whether the law can be embedded by Congress into a permanent structure in its existing condition.

The employers have disliked NRA because it is a bureau of control of their business affairs. The American Federation of Labor now denounces it as an elusive rainbow of higher wages and better working conditions.

It commands the enmity of Senators Borah, Nye and others, who say it has been used to consolidate monopoly at the expense of the smaller manufacturers and tradesmen.

AA has thrown new worries at the administration. It is rapidly losing her rich prestige in the cotton market of the world. The higher cotton prices have placed the southern growers at a disadvantage in the world markets.

PROTEST BILL To End Door Sales

A storm of protest from anti-fascist firms engaged in direct sales to consumers, through the House to house canvass method, developed over a bill designed to stop this method of distribution at a hearing today before the legislative committee on mercantile affairs.

During the course of the hearing, it developed that the bill had been declared unconstitutional by the United States Supreme Court.

Extend Jail Term

Sentence of 3 to 5 years was added in Suffolk court today to the original 1 to 7 year sentence of George J. Sullivan, 43, who escaped from state prison eight years ago through a shanty in Silvis.

Sullivan was arrested last month as he left Sing Sing on parole.

Today's sentence was pronounced by Judge John M. Gibbs after Sullivan pleaded guilty to a charge of escaping.

MAIL

Bandit Gang ROUNDUP NEAR

Roundup of the mail truck bandits was recently made $22,900 at Fall River. It was predicted by a federal official in Boston today after a courageous mail driver foiled a similar holdup attempt at North Scituate, R. I., outside the pocket.

Postoffice Inspectors T. P. Cronin and T. M. Coddie sped from Boston to Providence to meet Inspector Francis N. Riley, investigating the second bold effort to rifle the mail.

Chief Postoffice Inspector J. J. Bevin was absent but was described as "an important bit of news."

Three members of the Fall River holdup gang were believed involved in today's robbery attempt. The bandits were believed to be the same as those who failed because Harry Stevens, courageous mail truck driver, served his truck into the bandit car, knocking an orange-masked gunman into the air.

Stevens' truck, carrying thousands in payroll currency, was waylaid on the Farmington place in North Scituate.

U. S. ARMY Increase Approved

Washington, Feb. 5 (AP)—After hearing General Douglas MacArthur army chief-of-staff, outline a $400,000,000 program to modernize the army, the House military committee today recommended enactment of a measure to add 20,000 men and 600 officers to the military forces.

Mighty is the power of the "automatic." Two bandits walked into a Chicago restaurant, only two ordered, "Sticks 'em up" Faces to the wall," and immediately one hundred men and women stuck them up and turned their faces to the wall, to be robbed.

This is done repeatedly, because bandits know that the hundred or more can be relied upon always to stick them up.

If they knew that fifty of those "stick up" would pick up the bandits, they would not know that.

In the fraternity are John Concoran, Middlesex County register of deeds; State Representative Owen Gallagher of South Boston; David Goldstein of the Catholic Fraternity Guild, and others.

WRITES Of Sensations IN DEATH TRY

Portland, Me., Feb. 5.—The gas has been on more than a half hour, today. It is a pleasant sensation.

A note containing these sentences was found today, according to police, beside the unconscious form of Kenneth L. Macomber, 26, former Deering High School track star, who was president of the Deering Men's Club.

Macomber was found in the gas-filled kitchen of the club house. Two other notes, police said, discovered in the kitchen, stated: "The fourth contained a statement that he had lost faith in human nature."

Macomber was taken to Maine General Hospital. Doctors said he had a fair chance to recover.

FAMINE STALKS In Soviet Areas

Vienna, Feb. 5 (INB)—Another famine has descended upon wide areas in Russia, and millions of peasant peasants, whose crops have been wrested from the soil by the Bolsheviks, today face starvation, according to a manifesto issued by Cardinal von Habsburg, head of the interconfessional international famine relief committee for the Soviet Union.

BONUS Plan Offers SCRIPT, CASH

By International News Service
Washington, Feb. 5.—A new plan to appease World War veterans who are demanding their Adjusted Service Compensation, certified for this year, was being concocted in the Senate today.

The tentative plan, sponsored by Senator Clark (D.) of Missouri, with the assistance of Senator George McFadden of Georgia, would guarantee from two to three per cent in excess of the amounts due them if they wait until 1945.

Those who refuse to wait would be leased government service for the face value of their certificates. This would prevent the selling of new money, as provided by the Frazier bill in the House.

The script would be accepted in payment on all government loans, such as those granted by the Housing and Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

Clark has discussed his plan with President Roosevelt.

'32 FUGITIVE Gives Up in Salem

Salem, Feb. 5.—Cecil Whitman, 24 of Fowler street, Danvers, walked into Salem jail today and surrendered himself, but he might repay the wrong he had done Deputy Sheriff Edward P. Carlin by a half year's stay. On July 9, 1932, Whitman was in Carlin's custody on the street.

Whitman, who still has 15 months to serve of a two-year sentence for larceny, started a successful fight while returning from a dentist's office. Deputy Carlin had accepted to his request not to be handcuffed, and a half he had been driving a truck from Vermont to Boston, making good money. But his conscience bothered him.

N. H. Woman Burned

Milford, N. H., Feb. 5 (AP)—Mrs. Margaret Foley, 68, was seriously burned today when her night gown caught fire as she was lighting a stove. Neighbors, who heard her screams, extinguished the flames. Mrs. Foley was taken to St. Joseph's hospital, Nashua.

5th Gospel Believed Found

Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service

London, Feb. 5.—Three little fragments of a papyrus manuscript, embedded by the show brittle of time since they were written on 124 years ago, today engaged the excited, reverent research of British Museum authorities who believe they may be part of a "fifth gospel."

Convinced that the pages are at least the earliest originals of Christian writing yet discovered, the museum hopes they may yet prove to be the remains of a companion independent story of the life and death of Jesus to the accepted accounts of the disciples Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John.

The fragments are believed to be part of a manuscript written in 130 A. D. The writing is, therefore, more than a half century earlier than the Chester Beatty papyri, considered the earliest known manuscript of the New Testament.

The new "find" reached the museum in a collection of Greek papyri that came from Egypt and was bought from a dealer.

"It was found to be part of a gospel, but not of any known gospel. It bears greater resemblance to that of St. John than to any other, but there are lines in this new version that are not in the known ones," the keeper of the manuscripts declared.

Crosby received formal notice that the Italian government had purchased five of his pictures for its home in McLean, Va., yesterday.

Love Letters of Napoleon Deceived by Josephine

Napoleon crossing the Alps into Italy. It was in this period that he penned the passionate letters to Josephine. From a painting by Jacques Louis David.

Marie-Joseph-Rose Tascher De La Pagerie, called Josephine, Empress of the French, as she looked in 1798. From the design of Jean Baptiste Isabey.

LITTLE CORPORAL SENDS STERN LETTER TO WIFE IN PARIS

By HENDRIK WILLEM VAN LOON

Author of "The Story of Mankind," "The Story of the Bible," and "Who Has Spent the Last Five Years Making an Intimate Study of the Napoleonic Period."

The ruse which Josephine employed to provide a suitable excuse for her delay in Paris and by which she tried to pacify her too ardent husband in Italy when he stormed and fretted at the idea of being separated from her was as old as the hills of Judea, if not older.

She pretended to be pregnant and hinted discreetly at the pride with which he would greet his first-born son when he returned from his victorious campaigns in Italy.

Did the superman fall for these endearing promises? He did and even harder than usual.

MILAN, April afternoon, (no date). I don't know who, since morning, I've been happier. I've a feeling that you're left for here. My idea overabundant me with joy.

I'm dying of joy to think of seeing you with child. That must give you a majestic and respectable look that seems to me, my good friend, you'll come here, it will agree with you, and you're going to give me an infant as pretty as its mother, who will love you as his father loves you, and when you are very old, when you're a hundred, he'll be your consolation and your happiness.

But, from now to then, take care not to love him more than me.

Be jealous. Adieu, my sweet love, adieu, my great love, come quickly and listen to the lovely music and see this beautiful Italy.

It only needs you to improve your mind to that for me, at last you know that when my Josephine is about she's all I see.

Pangs of Love
"Only Half Alive"

At general headquarters at Milan, the 23 Prairial of the French Republic, one and indivisible. Josephine, where did you mail that letter? If it was in Paris, then my unhappiness is certain: you don't love me any more! I've nothing left but to die. Can it be possible?

All the snakes of the Furber to my breast, already I'm only half alive. Oh, you! I shall accuse myself to everything in this new state of affairs; but I cannot accuse myself to esteeming you less; no, my love, it's not possible! My Josephine is as the way; at least she leaves me a little; such promise of love cannot have disappeared in two months.

The man who will give you this letter is the Duke of Bourbon, the greatest officer in this country, your being sent to Paris to present his respects to the government.

Adieu, my Josephine, the more thought of you makes me happy; everything has changed. Kiss your sweet children. They write me charming letters. Since I've begun to feel that I shouldn't love you any more, I love them all the more. Despite distant predilection, I shall love you all my life.

I've read tonight all your letters, even that one written with my blood. What ideas they raised up in my mind.

He Was Making History, Meanwhile
Meanwhile Napoleon was making history at such a rate of speed as the world had not seen since the days of Alexander the Great. The Archduke, Charles of Austria, one of the very few Hapster, and it contains one sentence to which I want to draw your attention. "I hurried up my military operations (to be ready to receive you)."

"You Never Loved: I Adored You"

Hurried military operations are apt to be costly. But what were a few lives to a man half crazed with longing for a woman who did not arrive?

Same Day. At general headquarters at Milan, the 23 Prairial of the Year Four of the French Republic, one and indivisible.

Josephine, you should have left Paris the fifth, you should have left the eleventh, you hadn't left the twelfth... My soul was carried away with joy; it is filled with sorrow.

Every post arrives without bringing me a letter from you. When you write there are few words, while is never that born of deep sentiment.

It seems that you're already chosen and you know just whom you want to replace me.

As for you, my happiness if I can ever bring happiness to you, I don't speak of myself. You've never loved me. I hurried up my military operations; I calculated that you would be at Milan the thirteenth, and you're still in Paris.

I withdrew within myself and choke off a sentiment unworthy of me; and if glory isn't sufficient for my happiness, it gives you a chance to die and win immortality.

As for you, I hope the thought of me won't prove too distasteful. My unhappiness is to have known you so little; yours is to have judged me as you judge the men around you.

My heart has never known mediocre things. I forbade myself the pleasure of love, but you inspired in me a passion without limit, a drunkenness that degrades me. The thought of you with me comes before anything else in the world; your slightest wish for me is a sacred law; to be able to see you was my sovereign happiness; you are beautiful, graceful; the sweet and celestial quality of your soul is the quality of your face.

I have adored everything that you are; if you had been less experienced, younger, I should have loved you less.

"You Were Cruel, I Warn You"

Everything pleased me, even the memory of your mistakes and of the frightful row that preceded our marriage by that virtue for me is what you did; but what pleasure in your glory meant nothing to me beyond that it could not be shared by you and flattered your pride.

Your portrait was always in my heart; I never thought without seeing it and covering it with kisses. You left my portrait lie without even looking at it during six months.

Josephine, you should have created the happiness of an extravagant man. You have made me unhappy. I warn you. I realize this when I come into conflict with you only to see you win within me a victory almost limit that enslaves all my life.

Cruel! Why have you made me believe in a sentiment that you really do not feel? But this reproach isn't worthy of me. I've never believed in happiness.

Every day death whisks its course around me... I feel worth all the pleasures of life. Josephine, stay in Paris, write me no more, I shall leave you my exile. A thousand daggers tear my heart; do not drive them in further. Adieu, my happiness, my life, everything that has meant anything to me is dead.

Now Josephine was affected by this last letter, exclusively in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX ADVISES GIRLS ON LOVE

Cure for Loneliness When You're Away From Home Town

A FEW days ago, a young man wrote to me and signed his letter "Lonesome in Big City."

He said he was amply able to provide for a wife, and that he had a nice home, but he was so shy and distrustful of himself that he had never had the courage to ask any girl to marry him. And that his acquaintances considered him a self-sufficient egotist.

Then this morbidly shy man went on to say that he was so desperately lonesome he was in the habit of prowling round in the suburbs at night and trying to cheer himself with such domestic glimpses as he managed to see through the window curtains of family living room.

The father read his evening papers in peace and contentment, the mother was sewing, or holding a child in her arms, other children played or did their home work, and this shy, distrustful young man asked himself why this normal happiness was not his.

When a boy or girl leaves home and comes to the big city, they should try to bring as many introductions from the old home as possible.

Such contacts may not be thrilling, but they lead to something interesting later, and such introductions will be safe.

The tragedies which overtake young people in New York are tragedies of loneliness.

Girls utterly wrecked from sitting in a hall bedroom, evening after evening, will be likely to encourage the stranger who speaks to them on the street.

And the farm boy is glad enough to respond to any back-slapper.

Learn, when you're young, not to be poor company for yourself. Develop your resources, cultivate the thing for which you have a taste.

There's a world of interest in the daily papers.

Look up books in libraries, a good many of them have rooms set aside for discussion and clubs.

At the public library in Washington a group of people are organized to write for publications most each week and have, at other times, pleasant social evenings.

Make contacts, don't sit in your hall bedroom and be lonesome.

Force yourself to know people. Get interested and have a domestic life of your own.

Don't be like "Lonesome in Big City" looking in other people's living-rooms, windows to try to satisfy your domestic yearnings.

Think of it! A free Rental Bureau right in the heart of the downtown shopping center. R. H. White Co. in cooperation with the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser, has established this unique service. You are invited to visit here with Barbara Holmes at any time.

Which Loves More—the Man or the Woman? —By Nell Brinkley

12 YEARS OLD
"I Love You More Than You Love Me."
Lovers and husbands and wives have said that for centuries since the first cave-lovers decided to cling together against the rest of the world, and make themselves a FAMILY.

18 YEARS OLD
"You don't love me as much as I love you."
An accusation half for the exquisite delight of hearing the loved one protest, and prove a greater love; half in real belief.
Twelve years old argues under the vines on the back porch; "I love you better than you do me!" "You DON'T. I love you best."
Eighteen years old says it too, and means it, so painfully.
Eighty years old still says: "I love you more than you do me. And I should know by now—I've loved you for sixty years!"

80 YEARS OLD
"You DON'T. I love you best."
Eighteen years old says it too, and means it, so painfully.
Eighty years old still says: "I love you more than you do me. And I should know by now—I've loved you for sixty years!"

Bridge

Example of Stretching Play

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Part of the thrill in playing duplicate bridge is that very often the skillful player must make out, rationally dangerous bids and plays to obtain a good score on a deal.

The bidding:
South West North East
1NT Pass 1NT Pass
2NT Pass 2NT Pass

West was a player so much impressed by the value of short-suit leads that he nearly always led an unbid major short-suit against a notrump contract.

This, incidentally, was one of the factors which induced South not to bid the notrump.

West was being rather well known to him. The opening lead was the heart 6, declarer's Ace slaughtering the King. Declarer realized in his sorrow that a contract of 4 spades could probably not be beaten so it would be necessary for him to make four no-trumps to get a good score.

A small heart was led towards dummy's nine and West, still under the impression that this was the suit to attack, jumped right up with the Queen and returned the suit.

Nine tricks were in sight, but the effort to set up a tenth in the diamond suit would permit the opponents to cash their three high clubs and defeat the contract.

Ten tricks had to be played for, however, and South saw how to make them without much risk.

The Spade Queen was laid down and the last heart led on which a small diamond was discarded from the dummy. Next came the Diamond King.

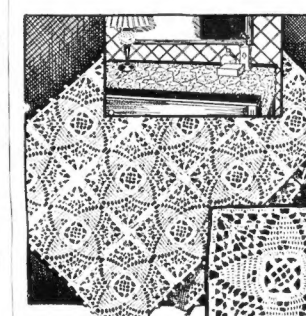

It appeared to East that South held no more spades and was trying to set up an entry to dummy with only the lone Queen left in the dummy. East could surely kill an honor with his Ace on the second round of the suit. East, therefore, permitted the Diamond King to hold.

The tenth trick secured, declarer overtook the spade Jack and ran the suit, conceding the last two tricks to East's two Aces.

BLEACH FOR NECK

Question: My neck is very discolored from constant rubbing against the fur collar of my coat. If you know of any pack or cream to bleach and whiten it, please publish it in your column. My complexion is very fair, which makes my neck all the more noticeable.

DOROTHY D. BONBURY.
Answer: The friction of collars will often cause necks to become discolored. If proper care is not taken of them, the following recipe should restore your neck to its original tone. Get a few ounces of kalin (Polla's Epsom) that has been made clean and pure. To two scant tablespoons add one tablespoon of rosewater and a teaspoon of lemon juice. Spread over the skin surface, and it remains there until it starts to dry. Remove with clear water, dry the skin surface, and rub in a nourishing cream.

BEAUTY

MARVELOUS FINGERNAIL REJUVENATOR HERE

By The Beauty Editor

IF YOU'VE BEEN waiting all your life for a fingernail rejuvenator to come along—a sort of combined cuticle softener and nail nourisher all in one—here's a cheerful news flash for you today.

It's the speediest and most effective oil of its kind we've ever seen, and it brings new hope and life to lovely ladies everywhere who have rightfully despaired of finding a preparation to ward off dry, brittle nails.

We heard of this grand little beautifier several months ago when it first made its debut in Hollywood. When we learned it could only be obtained there, we adopted a policy of watchful waiting, knowing that sooner or later it would come East. Now it has come to Boston and to other cities throughout the country.

If you have neglected your nails for years, using harsh polishes on them and depriving them of proper nourishment, you'll have to coax them back to their pristine beauty. But it can be done.

One of the subtlest things about this rejuvenator, is that you can use it while you have polish on your nails. However, I am told that it will be its work twice as efficiently if you'll discard your self-polish for a while.

The table beside your bed is the place for this preparation. Before doing off every night rub some of the liquid around the cuticle and all over the nail. It will stop your nails from drying up and breaking, and make it all you can expect a nail rejuvenator to do.

To learn the name of this nail rejuvenator and where it is sold, call the Beauty Editor, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a personal reply.

Adele Garrison's Love Serial

CHAPTER 200

THERE WAS such genuine sorrow and terror in the wailing chant from Lee Chow's lips, asking Hugh Granland to come quickly, as only he could help him, that I looked at Lillian in bewildered amazement.

Surely that was not the voice of a suddenly crazed man, but of one in desperate need, pleading for aid.

Yet if we put aside the hypothesis of insanity, it left an alternative of belief for us but that which accused Lee Chow of coolly, deliberately plotting against Dickie's life, and concocting some diabolical scheme in which I was to be the central figure.

"Better not try any of the conspiracy stuff," she advised. "We're up against something new; something that is puzzling your father and Harry, and which, I think, has much befuddled this. But one thing is sure. We can't do a dratted thing about it until Hugh comes back—that is, except keep the gift Mr. Lee has sent us."

And now that he is safely in Dickie's room—didn't you hear them carrying him kicking and struggling down the hall?—I think it is time for you to untangle that frayed nerve of mine, unlearn those mental lies, as it were, and relax your mind and body.

Kate appeared in the doorway, one white eye trained on the outer door, the other giving Lillian oblique attention.

"Did all fees," she proclaimed. "I go now, bring hot milk fast."

as little sheep's tails kin viggie." "All right," Lillian told her, adding, as she went out of the door: "Wait until you get back with the milk before you begin playing detective."

"I hate to ride her," Lillian commented, as she locked the door again. "But we don't want her snooping around keyholes for awhile, at least, and you know strong measures are necessary to accomplish that desired end."

"I know all about it," I answered. "I also know that you have just about saved my reason tonight by bringing me in here. I've had about all that I could stand. May I look at the children before I'm down?"

"Good! Why the docility?" she retorted, and led the way to the nursery, where Baby Faith in her snowy crib was demonstrating her resemblance to a crumpled roseleaf; and then to the room beyond, where Junior and Roderick were sprawled in beautiful, boyish slumber.

My father's voice, calling through the door, brought us back in haste to the front room. I went to talk to you both, please," he said.

Sharlene Exhibits Sympathy

Some of the gay people who constantly surrounded Sharlene bore her off for a shopping tour which left Stuart free for a refreshing hour with the old marine painter.

After that, Stuart wandered about, unwilling to leave the hotel until he had a return message from Foreman.

In the late afternoon, he walked out to the street where the lei women crouched on the curb making endless garlands of bright blossoms. He bought a lei of ginger flowers for Sharlene with the last fifty cents he had in his pocket.

When Sharlene came in, a bell-boy came with her, laden with many packages. "Hello, Stuart!" she greeted him gaily. "Heaven, it's hot! Wait till I get into a cool kimono and I'll show you all my loot!"

When she returned, wrapped in a clinging, cool green negligee, she brought a string of jade beads to her hand. Stuart rose and placed the yellow ginger lei about her neck.

He did it with a little ceremony all his own. She sniffed the flowers happily, exclaiming with her finger-falling, appreciating. "Oh, lovely! Aren't they fragrant? You're so thoughtful, dear!"

Shows Her "Loot"

Then she took off the lei and substituted the jade beads, turning to the mirror. "Look, Stuart! I got these for only five hundred dollars."

Behind her, he dropped the ginger lei, already willing, into the wastebasket.

Sharlene began to show him the rest of her "loot" from the shops of Honolulu. There was a Japanese kimono of rich, heavy crepe, its design a shower of apple blossoms on a dove grey background, and a couple of silver brocade. There were antique Chinese embroidery, East Indian inlaid boxes, and hand-woven tula mats for the sun room at home.

In the midst of the display, the radiogram came.

HOLDING EVERYTHING UNTIL AFTER EXHIBIT STOP BOOST PRICE STOP YOU SHOULD BE HERE.

ABB FOREMAN: "Well, I'm glad he hadn't sold anything," observed Sharlene, lay down on the couch to rest, not noticing how fixated Stuart was staring at his radio message.

"Oh, Katie!" the maid came in from Sharlene's bedroom. "Cocktails for eight in half an hour. Katie, and I'll wear my yellow chiffon."

As Katie disappeared with the purchases and wrappings, Sharlene long looked at Stuart.

"Where's my lei?" he asked. "I flushed a little and plucked it out of the basket."

"Why, Stuart?" she looked at him keenly. "How could it have been there? Then, with an arm around the smile she took off the jade necklace and tossed it to him, placed the ginger lei over her shoulder.

But he resumed his hopeless contemplation of the radiogram. "Sharlene, let's take the next boat back."

"What?"

"Would you mind? I should be there—you heard what Foreman said—and now Abe. Besides, I'm doing nothing here—I'm not producing."

Tide of Ideas

"Why should you produce for a while? You need a rest and a change. I don't need any rest. I'm the full tide of ideas and enthusiasm. I've got to get them out of my system."

"Well, get some materials and set to work on some Hawaiian scenes. He shot her a derisive look. "Fat chance—but anyway, I want to go home. I've got to tell something."

"Bel something? But Stuart—then the last thing I want!"

"Oh, Sharlene—don't you see? I'm out of money."

"Out of money? Why, dear, that isn't possible."

Money From Woman

"I've always had to think about it," he said ruefully from her shoulder. "And I'm all inhibited about taking money from a woman."

"Silly! You aren't taking it—it's already yours. And you're spending it for me. I'll arrange at the bank for a joint account. You draw whenever and however much you please."

He sat up and looked at her, frowning, incredulous. "I suppose there are limits?"

"I don't know. You'll have to go into that with another later. There's always some to be enough. It's my own income—separate from here."

"I'll make all I need," he said defensively. "Money doesn't mean anything to me personally. I always get enough to eat and pay for Mr. Jingle's gas."

"And silk stockings for Julie—," she teased him, hoping to lighten his mood. "Or some other model."

Julie eyed all she got. "I may never be able to take care of you, Sharlene. But I'll not be a parasite."

"Those pictures, Abe Foreman has, ought to bring in a fair amount of cash."

"Why, of course, dear! But now that we've been here, don't you wish him to hold them until we get home?"

"He's surrendered. All right, Sharlene. But when can we go home?"

She looked at him with sudden fright in her eyes.

"Am I Unfair?"

"Stuart—I can't go home yet. I've got to keep running. Will you let me stay with you a while longer? Listen... Mother says Kent has brought a wife out there—," her voice failed.

"Oh, no. Of course we can't go home then. I—I reckon I've been falling asleep in the garden, and the house."

"I need you, Stuart, in a smothered voice."

"As long as you do, I'm yours to command. I reckon I just got suddenly—the whole ego felt injured—looks like a tempest in a teapot to you, eh?"

"No. I was stupid of me to let you feel hurt for one second."

"No, I was stupid of me to let him feel hurt for one second."

"Before he could answer, there was a vigorous rat-at-tat at the door, and the sound of much laughing and wise-cracking which announced the arrival of the guests for cocktail. Sharlene fled into her bedroom to dress, leaving Stuart to do the honors."

IN THE BOTTLE THAT POURS

Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman Says:

Her Mother Invites Young Man to Dinner

Dear Mrs. Beeckman: I have been going about with a young man for about four months. He told me cases for me, and he has given me two gifts. I would like to know if it would be proper to invite him to dinner at my home, or does the boy invite the girl to his home first? If I am to do the inviting, will you please tell me in what manner I should invite him?

2. My mother likes my sitting in the car with him after we come home from a show or a party, and I would like to know what I should do about it? Should I invite him in, and if I do, must I serve something? What is the proper time for him to go? We usually go home about 11 o'clock and I feel that it is too late to ask him in. Is there any polite way of telling him the way my mother feels?

1. The nicest thing of all and the most appropriate, would be for your mother to invite this young man to dine at your home. She might write him a note of invitation.

2. When you arrive home at 11 o'clock, it's too late to invite this young man to come in. And your mother is right about the poor taste of your "sitting" in the car. Stay a gracious good night, and tell him what a good time you have had at the party or at the theater. Make this sound taste a magnificent, and your own taste—and you won't even have to say that your mother suggested it!

Kanally Extols Hornbostel

By Jack Conway

TOM KANALLY, athletic director at the B. A. A., tells me that Charley Hornbostel, of Indiana, has the necessary speed to break Hal Cutbill's indoor record of 2m. 12s. for the 1000 yards set at Buffalo in 1922.

"I consider Hornbostel one of the greatest of modern runners," said Kanally. "He proved his fact at the Milrose games when he won the 1000-yard race and then stepped out and shattered the world's mark for 600 yards in 1m. 11s. 1/2."

Hornbostel runs without effort, and has the necessary speed to break Hal Cutbill's indoor record of 2m. 12s. for the 1000 yards set at Buffalo in 1922.

"Ray still holds the indoor record for a mile in Boston with a mark of 4:15 which he set at the Arena in 1923. I look for this record to tumble Saturday night when a great field competes in the Hunter Mile."

"The famous Indiana star will compete in the 1000-yard run at the B. A. A. games at the Garden on Saturday night, and has a fine chance to crack another world record."

I ASKED Kanally who was the most colorful athlete ever to compete in a B. A. A. meet.

"Ray," was the quick answer. "He had everything. From the second he came on the track he had the eyes of the crowd. Even when he had the great run in an opponent."

HARLOW HAILED AS 'TAPE WE WANT' AT HARVARD

300 Attend AND HANG ON EVERY WORD DICK SAYS

It is now Harvard's Dick Harlow. And Dick, formerly of Penn State, Colgate and Western Maryland, can retire to Westminster, Maryland, for a short rest before spring football brings him back to Cambridge.

Close to 200 members of the Harvard Club and their guests listened with rapt attention to the ornithologist football expert in the second of two testimonial dinners, at the Commonwealth avenue clubhouse.

As was the case at last week's dinner, tendered by the Harvard varsity football team, Harlow's brief but to-the-point speech met with acclaim.

Harlow did not tell the Harvard Club members what he mentioned at the dinner the week before when he remarked that "if I did not think I could fashion winning football teams at Harvard, I would never have accepted the offer to coach here."

Nor did he refer to his plan of adhering to one coaching policy from the freshmen teams up through the junior varsity and to the varsity, with the same ideas of offensive and football drilled into all teams.

But Harlow did tell the enthusiastic Harvard students and alumni how he had been closely following Harvard football since the days of the "grandest and greatest man and coach football" ever produced, Percy Haughton.

"I have always taught my football players to win without boasting, to lose without whining, and to keep on fighting however the going."

"Football is a man's game and the only remaining sport which women can't play."

Roger B. Merriman, '36, welcomed Harlow to the Crimson's side.

"In Harlow we have a man who has an avocation in his sport. I wouldn't be surprised if his knowledge of bird life meant more to him even than his grilling lore. That is the type of man we want at Harvard."

Harlow's remarks were met with a roar of applause. He was then introduced by the Harvard Club members.

BOUCHER BRUIES MEET RED WINGS

Gains on LEADERS ON TOP BARRY ON TOP IN BRUIN SCORING

By Associated Press
Montreal, Feb. 5.—In accord with the rise of the New York Rangers in the American division of the National Hockey League, Frank Boucher, the team's ace center, has taken over third position in the circuit's scoring list.

With 30 points, five of them gained last week, Boucher not only has supplanted Detroit's first string line of Larry Aurie, Herb Lewis and Conney Wolland as leader of the American division, but threatens Harvey Jackson's hold on second place in the whole league.

The Toronto forward, the leader during the early part of the season, ended last week's play with only one-point advantage over his New York rival.

Although scoring only one assist during the week, Charlie Conacher, Jackson's speedy teammate, held to first place with a total of 22 points, put together with 19 goals and 14 assists. Conacher and Jackson were tied in total goals, while Boucher and Aurie led in assists with 20 each.

The leading scorers are:

Goodfellow has been teaming with Eddie Wiseman and Johnny Borrell on the starting line in the Bruins.

Manager Jack Adams predicts that Larry Aurie, Conney Wolland and Herbie Lewis will add a few more points to their individual totals.

The Aurie-Wolland-Lewis line is the best scoring trio in the N. H. L., having a total of 34 points to date. Aurie has 14 goals and 10 assists, a mark which surpasses every first string center since Jackson and Jackson of Maple Leafs.

The time was for the team's first string line in the Bruins.

Tech Loses Claffee

Claffee

A searing right hand punch, delivered by a former Southern Conference 135-pound champion, now at Columbia Law School, has defeated Tech's one of its most promising boxers, Fred Claffee.

Five stitches in Claffee's chin were necessary to close the wound. Coach Rawson has Bill Wolf, promising sophomore, ready to fill the gap. Wolf has been pronounced fit by the Tech doctors, but will not be out for crew during the coming term.

Claffee's fall from the top of the list of studies in naval architecture, in which he is majoring, will prevent him from driving. This leaves the burden of steering the varsity on either Mowatt, Guy Hines or Tom Graham.

Mowatt set the pace in all Tech's races, while Guy Hines was the pace-setter for the 150-pound boatload in his victories over Harvard, Princeton and Cornell last spring.

Claffee, while a powerfully built fellow, lacks the experience of the other two. However, the Crimson tans are still very much in the race.

KANSAS Tech Ace Transfers To Michigan

Uncovered NEW STAR

By Associated Press
Newark, N. J., Feb. 5.—Kansas, which gave Glenn Cunningham to the track world, can begin to lose the prizes of young Elton Brown of the Pittsburg (Kansas) Teachers' College and the Kansas City A. C.

Winner of the national junior 800-meter championship last year, Brown is now engaged in taking a high place in mile and half-mile races. He started off brilliantly by winning the 800-yard special in the Milrose games in Madison Square Garden Saturday night and repeated his feat in the 800-yard special of the annual Beton Hall College games here last night.

His time on the excellent Garden track was 1 minute, 57.7 seconds. He cut that down to 1:56.40 last night over the flat, slippery boards of the 113th Regiment Armory.

N. U. Enters Sandler in High Jump

Wants $10,000 OR ELSE

By Associated Press
New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—Jimmy "Red" Sandler, New England intercollegiate high jumper, will be entered by Nor Eastern U. in the B. A. A. games next Saturday night.

The Lowell youth won the sectional title last year at Springfield with a 6 feet 3 inches, despite the fact that he was hampered with a bad knee ailment of last winter.

In the U. S. C. A. meet at Philly last year, he tied Keith Brown of Yale and Steve Woodbury of Dartmouth for second place.

The Northeastern mile relay team, which made the best time at the Casey games here, will race N. Y. U.

LUPE

FILM FAVORITE ON AIR WAVES

By N. F. T.

It's all-flutter, the heart of "Old Maestro" Ben Bernie. He's making ready for his introduction (WEEI) of the exotic and vivacious Lupe Velez by radio.

Lupe lends her fiery Mexican personality to the half hour between 9 and 9:30, when Ben boosts his beer again, and an usual of a Tuesday evening at that time.

Let's see now, what were some of the little things that happened in and around the radio realm and involving workmen these days?

There's a gala RKO party at the RKO, where the press greeted Joe Penner and the Bowditch Sisters, who were to be exact, on the Bowditch night of last week. One guest, with merriment at its height, telephoned home to explain he was with a crowd of Bowditch Sisters.

N. F. T. Bowditch Sisters. Apparently the assertion was not duly credited as to whether they were on the other end.

Any event, Constance, Martha and Vet didn't want to see a gentleman being doubted, so they rang a chorus of "Dinah" into the microphone.

Whereupon all was well—in fact, well, on both ends. A very pretty bouquet of roses reached the Bowditch dressing room next morning.

JUST WHAT FURY?

Then came the humorous incident of mistaken identity in connection with rival local further programs—that was Sunday night. Perhaps if the host folks can arrange to have a distinguished guest, it will be on the Fox program and laud the host institution, the stars will be even. Talk about embarrassing moments, Governor Currier experienced one on that night, when he was effectively and good naturedly exposed out of the situation.

Still another chuckle was provided by the show-shower who met a last night, explaining he had obtained his work through the ERA bureau. "Well now," said his well pleased friend, "these ERA and NRA and WNAC movements certainly fine thing, and that both agreed on the point."

Willie Morris, our Boston Songstress with the bygone name, takes her second turn on the "Boston Boz" hour (WEEI) on the stroke of 10 p. m.

FRANCE

Despite Default Loaned to Allies

By STANTON B. LEEDS

Paris, Feb. 5.—While France has defaulted on her war debt obligations to the United States, during the year since the war she has loaned more than $700,000,000 to European nations, it was revealed in official figures of the ministry of finance today.

During the post-war period France's gold coffers have been liberally open, especially to her allies of the Little Entente, whenever there was an opening to "facilitate" French diplomacy on the continent.

It is understood that a huge gold credit is now to be opened in the Bank of France for the benefit of Italy. It is reported the initial credit will be at least $200,000,000.

France has extended a financial helping hand particularly to Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, and Rumania, the Little Entente powers that echo France's political sentiments in the League of Nations.

It is said that such allies as Belgium, Poland, and the Little Entente have been made, it is said, largely to finance the sale of French munitions to nations opposed to Germany. France has also been tried to prevent "unhealthy" with France in the League of Nations.

Labor

Income of A. F. of L. Has Increased Greatly

By B. C. FORBES

One organization that has enjoyed an extraordinary measure of recovery is the American Federation of Labor. Its membership, which had been dwindling, has greatly increased. And so, as a consequence, has its income—although, unlike business concerns, labor bodies do not have to account for the money, the millions, they take in.

Since "Nothing succeeds like success," prosperity has had its natural effect upon labor leaders. They have become more confident, bolder, more aggressive.

They have been fostering the idea, the fear, that unless their demands are granted, very wide-spread trouble will be precipitated in the automotive industry, the steel industry, the oil industry, the oil industry, the oil industry.

President Roosevelt's decision to continue the automobile credit until June 1, the date originally set for the expiration of the credit, has been a great help to the A. F. of L.

It is in accordance with American sense of fair play that one set of workers, belonging to one body, should have the right to intimidate other workers not belonging to that particular body.

If the right to work is common to every American citizen, it is amazing that a court of justice should forbid one set of workers to work in a factory where other workers who desire to earn an honest living?

By Associated Press

The British government has proposed the United States through the American ambassador in London, to the United States, to agree to the military and political situation in the world, and to the economic problems is reached on the basis of the Anglo-French proposals.

The military clauses of the Versailles treaty are indicated in the American press.

FIGURES ON Trade

Noted by Haney

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University.

New York, Feb. 5.—Figures for the latest week, while showing continued activity in the automobile boom, indicate a more mixed general condition of business.

Further explanation of industrial activity is practically certain but the best opinion among careful observers is that the peak of the current rise will probably be reached by March. Steel production climbed to about 56 per cent of capacity. This chiefly reflects active automobile production, and good operations by farm implement and can manufacturers. Motor production failed to meet the gain usual at this time of year, but that means little, since this year it has merely been having its "seasonal" slump a little out of season.

Lumber and cotton cloth production were really backward, the former being much below year ago. Cotton mills are hampered by the low cotton crop, and compared with the price they can get for most yarns and cloths.

Control of GRAIN MARKETS

Washington, Feb. 5 (AP)—Congress started work today on legislation to control grain and cotton markets under similar federal control.
